

2021 Annual Report
Professor Dame Sue Black, Baroness Black of Strome DBE FRSE
President, Royal Anthropological Institute

This is the final year that I shall have the privilege of being the president of the institute, and my first, most pleasurable and important duty is to thank the Trustees, Fellows and staff of the RAI, who have done so much to make this time pass enjoyably. It has been in many ways a remarkably eventful four years, yet with each passing moment I have been increasingly conscious of the institute's great strengths; its breadth of interests, the depth of its knowledge of the subject, and the extraordinary collegiality that marks the way that it goes about its business. It is largely due to these many qualities that the institute finally received in 2020, during the height of the pandemic lockdown, the great distinction of the award of a Royal Charter, the height of my period in office.

During the course of my time, I have also come to realise the enormous contribution that has been made to the institute by the occasional generous legacies that it has received from its Fellows: the Horniman Committee, which I also had the privilege of chairing, was founded after the Second World War to help fund research students, and has done so continuously now for many decades. Many of the students whom it has funded have gone on to become well-known names in the subject. The Urgent Anthropology Fund, set up by George Appel during his life-time has funded wonderful research in many parts of the world; the Esperanza Fund, created by Edmund Leach, contributed materially to the stabilisation of the institute during the difficult years of the 1970s, and still contributes to our activities in crucial ways. The Fagg Trust, set up in the name of a legacy from one of our most long-standing Fellows, has provided sustained support to our archive department. Yet again, a legacy that we received in the early 2000s enabled us to repay our mortgage on 50 Fitzroy Street, which was an essential factor in enabling us subsequently to open it up for events. Without these generous gifts, the institute would be very different, and much less able to serve the community.

Thus, I would like to mark my final report with a plea; if you are in a position to help the institute in this way, either in your will or as a living gift, please do consider doing so. We receive no government revenue, and – though one would hardly suspect this in the light of our extraordinarily buoyant programme of events, publications and other activities - in many respects the institute faces profoundly significant financial challenges going forward. Any amount, however large or small could make a difference as we attempt to maintain the institute in the coming years. You may be assured that any gift you may make will be treasured and husbanded well so that it will achieve the maximum good for the coming generations. I thank you for considering this matter carefully.

In looking back at 2021, we may reflect upon the fact that as the year began, we were still in lockdown. We were then permitted to open again, albeit in rather a careful way in the early part of the autumn. Then, as Covid19 cases rose again the institute closed once more, before finally reopening just after the end of the year. Throughout this difficult period, it is a tribute to our wonderful staff that we maintained our events and other activities uninterrupted. Indeed, there were notable highlights. In the spring we experimented with holding our Film Festival and related conference virtually. To this end, the films were shown via a virtual platform called Festivalscope. The related discussions took place in a series of Zoom discussions, including the richly-deserved ethnographic film life-time achievement award presented to Professor Andre Singer. Though novel, it was a great success. We are now planning our 2023 film festival and conference in such a way that will retain an element of hybridity.

As the lockdown lifted, we were able to hold, for the first time in the institute's history, two, scintillating Huxley lectures at the same time; the postponed lecture from 2020 by Professor Levinson entitled 'The interaction engine': the evolution of the infrastructure for language, and that for 2021 by Professor Shennan, 'Population and the dynamics of culture change'. We are most grateful to the British Museum for their kindness in permitting us to hold the event there.

Throughout this time, our flagship publications the JRAI and AT continued uninterrupted, including the 2021 JRAI Special Issue on the Anthropology of Data. We also launched the next of our book series, The Nuauulu World of Plants, by Professor Roy Ellen, which I am delighted to say subsequently won the 2022 Mary W. Klinger Book Award of the Society of Economic Botany.

Our seminar programme continued throughout, including our well-established Reviewer meets Reviewed. It was an unexpected benefit of holding this virtually that it has proved much easier to bring together authors and those who have reviewed their books. We also have greatly expanded our book launches, particularly notable of which was the celebration of the book which has resulted from our major conference, entitled The Anthropocene of Weather and Climate, edited by Professor Paul Sillitoe. Our Anthropology Communicates series also continued well, with many fascinating insights.

In the future, we will maintain our virtual seminars, for it is a source of great pleasure to be able to be together with Fellows and colleagues from so many far-flung parts of the world. They will, however, be interspersed with seminars at the institute, so that we will be able to retain the face to face sociality that can be so fruitful.

In conclusion, it has been a unique experience to lead the Institute through the Covid period and I can only hope for a little more normality as my successor comes into post. I wish the new President every good fortune in the role, and have every confidence that the institute will rise to the challenges that face it with its usual 'can do' attitude.

Treasurer's Report

During 2021, the RAI gradually started to return to normal working after the disruption caused by the Covid19 pandemic. As no staff were placed on furlough during this time, we have been able to maintain our usual roles, and we are now rebuilding our face to face programme. Nevertheless, our warning from previous years must remain, though now intensified by the uncertainty surrounding the wider economic situation. These include potentially extremely serious threats which may impact upon us markedly, such as rising inflation and the global implications of the war in Ukraine, which we can only partially counteract through our own efforts.

The threat to our journal income through the rise of the Open Access movement, noted in previous years, is beginning to become manifest. We are therefore budgeting for a gradual contraction of our income from Wiley of approximately 15% per year over the next five years, whilst at the same time discussing how we may be able to redress this. We are also actively exploring ways that we may be able to move to virtual film distribution, in order to replace the contracting income via our previous, physical DVD distribution.

The diversification of our investments so as to include property continues. At present, all the properties owned by the RAI are rented out, and provide a steady source of income. We have now completed the reallocation of the monies that were held with our stockbroker to two ethical investments platforms CCLA's COIF Charities Ethical Investment Fund, and Sarasin's Endowments Funds. At the time of writing our investments have contracted by about 10%.

Though the situation is challenging, the RAI continues to operate in budget surplus and has no debts.

Dr Fiona Bowie, Honorary Treasurer

Royal Charter

We reported last year that the Institute was deeply gratified to receive the gracious award of a Royal Charter in 2020. The Charter was sealed on 16th October 2020 from which date the new Royal Anthropological Institute of Great Britain and Ireland came into being, with Companies House Reference RC000916. The charity commission entered the new entity onto the Register of Charities on 16th August 2021 with registered charity number 1195523. The transition formally took effect on 31 December 2021. From 1 January 2022 all activities previously operated by the charitable company have been managed by the Royal Charter Body. The charitable company, whose accounts are presented here, has not traded since the transfer date and will be wound down over the next 12 months. The accounting period was extended to 30th April 2022 to allow enough time for the transfers of assets and liabilities in connection with the transition to be completed.

Library Donors during 2021 were;

Ajay Pratap, Roy Ellen, Jerry Eades, Marcus Banks (estate), Mark Clayton, Pat Caplan, Hazel Andrews, Les Roberts, Hastings Donnan, Elizabeth Tonkin

Fellows of the RAI who are members of the institute's committees may be found on this link <https://www.therai.org.uk/committees>.

These summarised accounts are extracted from the full unqualified audited accounts approved by the trustees on 01 July 2022. For further information, the full statutory accounts, which have been filed with the Registrar of Companies and the Charity Commission, should be consulted. These can be obtained from RAI offices at 50 Fitzroy Street, London W1T 5BT.

Auditors' statement on the summary accounts to the trustees of the Royal Anthropological Institute

We have examined the summary accounts set out on pages 5 to 6 inclusive.

Respective responsibilities of trustees and auditors

These summary accounts presented on pages 5 to 6 are the responsibility of the trustees. It is our responsibility to report our opinion on their consistency with the full accounts, on which we reported on 11 July 2022. Our report on the full accounts of the Institute includes information on the responsibilities of the trustees and the auditors relating to the preparation and the audit of those accounts and on the basis of our unqualified opinion on those accounts.

Basis of opinion

We have carried out the procedures we consider necessary to ascertain whether the summary accounts are consistent with the full accounts from which they have been prepared.

Opinion

In our opinion the summary accounts on pages 5 to 6 are consistent with the full accounts of the Royal Anthropological Institute for the period ended 30 April 2022.
